Ross Volunteers' Hop—

The annual hop of the Ross Volunteers which took place last evening was a magnificent social success. The Ross Volunteers is a military organization within the corps of cadets at the A. and M. College. In addition to the military features that are interesting to the members there is a social feature because the organization is one of the leading social clubs of the state, being composed of young men from all parts of Texas. In the Alumni Association the former Ross Volunteers remember their days in the organization with pleasure.

The dance was held in the mess hall. The interior had been beautifully decorated for the occasion and the young men who planned and executed the work are being congratulated upon the success of their efforts. Bunting of yellow and white, moss, pennants and crossed guns and swords were utilized to transform the hall into such a beautiful scene as it was. In the rear a sitting room was arranged for those not dancing. This room was divided from the hall with a lattice work done in yellow and white. Here were comfortable chairs, rugs, pillows, and settees for the pleasure and convenience of the guests. May baskets filled with lovely spring blossoms completed the pretty environment.

Mr. William Orth of Yoakum, captain of the Ross Volunteers, led the grand march, and with him in executing the evolutions of the march was Miss Deed Weddington, beautifully gowned for the occasion.

The dance was attended by many young ladies from all sections of the State. Handsome programs, containing twenty-four dances and four extras, were furnished each guest and a splendid orchestra provided the music.

Miss Park Entertained Bachelor Girls.

Among the most enjoyable social affairs enlivening the daily routine during the past week was the "lingerie" party given by Miss Anita Park on Thursday afternoon when she entertained in honor of the Bachelor Girls' Club. It is always a pleasure to be a guest in this delightful home, for Miss Park's gracious air of hospitality is infectious and her guests are soon at ease when in her presence. The decorations of the rooms were exceptionally beautiful and reflected artistic taste in their effective distribution and arrangement. Exquisite pink roses were the lovely blossoms filling crystal vases and brass baskets which were used in the library and music room. The dining room was radiant, a profusion of long-stemmed American Beauty roses contributing their beauty and fragrance.

The hostess is exceptionally original in her methods of entertaining, and on this occasion she planned diversions that were quite amusing as well as interesting. The guests first were asked to cut garments out of wrapping paper, after which they were instructed to pin these on a clothes line furnished for that purpose, and each guest was graded on her work. Mrs. R. W. Howell won the prize, a bag of starch. The guests were then given a contest, the questions to be answered by the name of some soap. Misses Clara Mahinney and Frances Gillespie won the prize, a small tub and washboard, for giving the most answers, and Miss Willie McDougald won the consolation, a cake of soap. A novel feature connected with the giving of the prizes was that they were hidden and each prize-winner had to hunt for her prize.

Originality was still featured in the serving of the refreshments, and the colors, yellow and brown, were used. Wooden plates were substituted for china, on which were served Neapolitan, veal with mayonnaise, sandwiches made of brown bread, apricot ice and individual chocolate cakes.

This entertainment was, by all present, pronounced an excellently arranged affair, the unanimous verdict being that Miss Park is indeed an ideal hostess.

Greetings for Miss Ara Haswell—

Thursday evening will be long remembered as an evening of very pleasant memories by a number of couples who went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Haswell to give greetings cordial and sincere to their daughter, Miss Ara, who is at home for a few days from school at Sophia Newcomb in New Orleans. Miss Ara has, by her lovable manner, made a host of friends, being especially beloved by this happy company of young people, and this opportunity of meeting with her again was indeed an appreciated and delightful pleasure.

Miss Ara at once played the part of hostess and gave her guests an evening replete with pleasure. Music and various games were principally the diversions, but dancing, which is always a most pleasurable means of entertainment, was enjoyed all during the evening, the highly polished floors of this elegant home being in fine condition for dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Haswell were largely instrumental in making the evening such a success.

Mrs. McQueen Honored Mrs. G. C. Street and Mrs. Ted Buell—

The informal "at home" given by Mrs. J. A. McQueen on Thursday afternoon was a charming affair planned on the same lines of elegant and artistic hospitality which always characterize this hostess' entertainments. Mrs. Ted Buell of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. G. C. Street Jr. of Houston, who have frequently visited Bryan and whose coming is always welcomed by a host of friends, were the guests whose presence furnished the inspiration for this pleasant affair. The appointments and decorations were suggestive of the lovely springtime and, in keeping with the pretty afternoon, the reception suite was in bounteous bloom with an effective treatment of roses and fragrant blossoms; and the arrangement of a few ferns as a background for the handsomely gowned assemblage completed the pretty scene.

This was quite an informal gathering of friends, each one choosing her own means of diversion, some playing cards, some conversing, while all enjoyed a musical treat, the numbers being contributed from among the guests; and so swiftly the hours flew by that the afternoon was gone too quickly for all.

Mrs. McQueen is an ideal hostess and possesses the rare gift of making her guests feel perfectly at home, and this fact was fully evidenced on this occasion.

The pleasures of the afternoon terminated with the serving of a daintily prepared ice course, served with angel food.

THE WEATHER.

April 19, 1913.

Forecast—Tonight fair; Sunday fair and warmer.

Weather Conditions.

The Northwestern barometric depression is now moving eastward over the lake region and is giving high precipitation over the northern portion of that region. Another depression has formed over the plateau which is attended by light to moderate precipitation in that section. Elsewhere the weather has been fair, with mostly clear skies over the South and East. Relatively high pressure prevails over the Northwest and over Atlantic districts. Changes of temperatures have been important except that a moderate rise occurred in districts east of the Mississippi River, and a moderate fall in the Northwest.
